Mar/Apr 2017

It is beginning to feel like Spring has arrived. The White Book was successfully published at the end of March and Easter is just around the corner.

This month will see our publication of Saggerson on Travel Law and Litigation 6th edition. Also issue 2 of vol 11 of our Journal of Comparative Law will be published.

In addition we will have the official launch of Natural Law and Comparative Law, edited by Russell Wilcox and Anthony Carr, during a conference and seminar at the Institute of Advanced Legal Studies as well as that of Assets of Community Value: Law and Practice by Simon Adamyk which will be launched in our shop.

Finally, we would like to congratulate Prof William Butler on being awarded the gold medal by the National Academy of Legal Sciences of the Ukraine (see page 3 for pictures).

NEW BOOKS PUBLISHED FROM WILDY, SIMMONDS & HILL

ASSETS OF COMMUNITY VALUE Law and Practice

Simon Adamyk

Price: £75.00
ISBN: 9780854902071
Extent: 486pp
Binding: hardback

This book provides guidance on the interpretation and application of the provisions relating to assets of community value under the Localism Act 2011. It aims to provide both legal and practical guidance, drawing together in one place the relevant principles from the Act, the accompanying Regulations, other primary and secondary legislation, Government guidance, the case law and elsewhere. It will provide assistance to a number of different groups: to those who wish to nominate a building or other land for listing as an asset of community value, to landowners who may wish to resist the listing of their property, to local authorities who have to determine the nomination and resolve any disputes (and maybe defend their decision on review and on appeal), and to the professionals who advise them.

The assets of community value provisions of the Localism Act 2011 are being extensively used and the impact of the provisions is not to be underestimated. Thousands of assets have been listed since the legislation came into force, and the provisions can have a significant impact on the landowner's rights in relation to his land, both while the land is still in his ownership and also if he wishes to dispose of the land. The impact of the provisions has increased significantly since they were first introduced, as a result of changes to planning legislation in 2015.

Simon Adamyk is a practising barrister at New Square Chambers, Lincoln's Inn. He read law at Downing College, Cambridge, and was awarded the highest mark in the University in each of the three years of his law degree and also a starred first in his first year. He also holds a Master's degree in law from Harvard Law School. He specialises in chancery/commercial law.

MEDIATION IN CONTEMPORARY CHINA

Continuity and Change

edited by
Fu Hualing and Michael Palmer

Price: £65.00
ISBN: 9780854902248
Extent: 420pp
Binding: hardback

This collection of essays is the result of a collaborative project between Professors Fu Hualing and Michael Palmer, along with scholars in both Hong Kong and mainland China, on the nature and place of mediation in the justice system of the People's Republic of China. The project explores key aspects of the continuing central importance of mediation as a dispute resolution process, the various efforts at the refurbishment of mediation that have been made over the past decade or so, and the reforms that would best enhance the practice, theory and teaching of mediation.

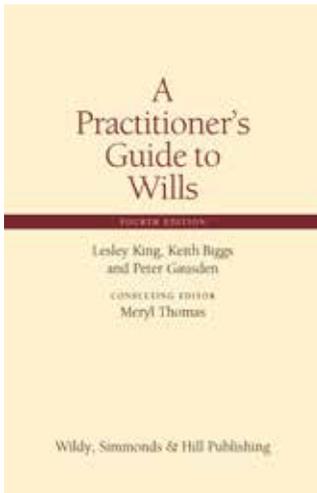

Mediation is used In China today for handling disputes in a variety of institutional contexts: 'people's mediation', which is primarily a form of local community dispute resolution, judicial mediation carried out by judges in and around the court, administrative mediation as conducted by officials and often focused on specific areas of governmental responsibility (as, for example, is the case with environment disputes), mediation in arbitral proceedings, and private mediation carried out without specific institutional support. Over the past fifteen years or so, in response to the rapid economic and social changes taking place in mainland China (including, inter alia, a declining importance of the local community) there have been attempts to institutionalize mediation, to resource it better, and to give it more legitimacy and legal force. In handling cases that come before the courts, judicial mediation continues to be seen as a particularly useful process, offering flexibility and effectiveness in dispute resolution (and even in handling serious criminal cases).

But at the same time, the widespread reliance on mediation can also mean that dispute negotiations do not take place in the 'shadow of the court' but, rather, in the 'shadow of mediation'. Under the current Xi Jinping government, the Chinese Communist Party's concern with political stability and social harmony has intensified. Even more so now than in the past, China's judges, people's mediators, arbitrators and others have to consider the social and political impact of their dispute resolution work, and to see mediation as a part of a larger scheme of dispute containment.

A PRACTITIONER'S GUIDE TO WILLS

Fourth Edition

Lesley King, Keith Biggs and Peter Gausden

Price: £69.00
ISBN: 9780854902040
Extent: 534pp + CD
Binding: hardback

The fourth edition of this popular title provides a practical and comprehensive reference for all those concerned in drafting and interpreting wills, and in giving effect to their provisions. The commentary is supported throughout by an extensive range of specimen clauses and model wills are provided in a separate appendix. All precedent material is included on the accompanying CD-Rom, enabling practitioners to adapt precedents for their own use.

Fully updated, A Practitioner's Guide to Wills now covers the Estates of Deceased Persons (Forfeiture Rule and Law of Succession Act) 2011, Marriage (Same Sex Couples) Act 2013, Trusts (Capital and Income) Act 2013 and the Inheritance and Trustees Powers Act 2014, the latter making major changes to the intestacy rules, family provision legislation and trustees' statutory powers of maintenance and advancement. It examines the impact of these legislative changes as well developments in taxation affecting wills, notably the new relevant property trust regime and its impact on pilot settlements, the new residence nil rate band, the reduced rate of IHT for gifts to charity and the new rules on trusts for disabled beneficiaries. The impact of the new residence nil rate band on planning and drafting is considered, together with the role that nil rate band gifts and discretionary trusts might still have to play in financial planning. The chapter on construction of wills has been rewritten following the Supreme Court's decision in Marley v Rawlings and subsequent cases including Reading v Reading are considered. The chapter on testamentary capacity has been revised in the light of developments since the Mental Capacity Act 2005 including Simon v Byford which considered the extent to which dementia affects testamentary capacity. Other recent cases discussed include the Court of Appeal decisions in Ilott v Mitson and its implications for testators who wish to exclude close family members from benefit.

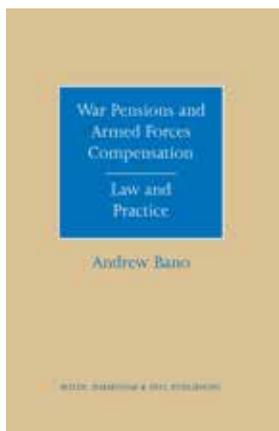

Lesley King is a solicitor, and a principal lecturer at the College of Law. Keith Biggs is now a Probate Consultant but was formerly the District Probate Registrar at Winchester. Peter Gausden was formerly a principal lecturer at the College of Law. He is now a consultant solicitor at Rowlinsons.

WAR PENSIONS AND ARMED FORCES COMPENSATION

Law and Practice

Andrew Bano

Price: £75.00
ISBN 9780854901906
Extent: 390 pp
Binding: Hardback 152x229mm

War pensions law contains a number of unique features, in particular, the onus on the Secretary of State to disprove entitlement to benefit beyond reasonable doubt. Although the war pensions scheme has now been replaced by the armed forces compensation scheme, claims continue to be made under it in respect of new conditions and in respect of deterioration in the condition of claimants already in receipt of awards.

The armed forces compensation scheme, which was introduced in 2005, proved controversial, particularly against the background of the very serious injuries sustained by members of the armed forces serving in Afghanistan, and was substantially amended in 2011 as a result of a review of the Scheme carried out under the chairmanship of Lord Boyce.

This book is written by an acknowledged expert in the field and provides for the first time an indispensable reference work covering all aspects of war pensions and armed forces compensation law and practice. The book traces the history of both schemes and provides a detailed commentary on the provisions of the Service Pensions Order 2006 and of the Armed Forces Compensation Scheme 2011, as interpreted by the nominated judges and by the judges of the Upper Tribunal and the appellate courts. The book covers the procedure for making a claim, bringing an appeal, and practice and procedure before the First-tier Tribunal (in England and Wales), the Pensions Appeal Tribunals (in Scotland and Northern Ireland), and the Upper Tribunal.

War Pensions and Armed Forces Compensation: Law and Practice is an authoritative and comprehensive analysis of the legal principles underlying entitlement to compensation for those injured or killed in the service of their country. It is designed also to be a practical and accessible guide for all those concerned in bringing and dealing with war pensions and armed forces compensation claims and appeals.

Andrew Bano is a visiting judge of the Upper Tribunal and a former president of the War Pensions and Armed Forces Compensation Chamber of the First-tier Tribunal.
