G. A. Sarpong

Price: £65.00
ISBN: 9780854902507

As a subject, Ghanaian Environmental Law has been influenced by Ghana's participation in several treaty arrangements aimed at addressing contemporary international challenges such as climate change, marine pollution and conservation of biodiversity. The approach adopted in this book is to ascertain the extent to which Ghanaian environmental jurisprudence has been influenced by Ghana's participation in the various fora or treaty arrangements on the subject. In that regard, using examples from the marine environment, wetlands and biotechnology, an attempt is made to provide an insight into Ghanaian implementation of treaty norms and draws lessons for legislators and policymakers.

The book has been structured to deal with basic doctrinal issues such as the nature, sources and development of Environmental Law; as well as other core aspects of the subject such as environmental justice. The role of regulatory bodies in environmental management and protection and the regulatory frameworks for the conservation, management and utilisation of natural resources are also discussed.

CHANGE OF NAME

The Law and Practice

Fourth Edition

by

Nasreen Pearce

Price: £35.00
ISBN: 9780854902408
Extent: 140pp
Binding: paperback

This fully updated fourth edition like its predecessors provides a simple straightforward guide on why and how person's acquires a name and how that name may be changed so that it is given legal recognition to identify the person concerned for all purposes.

The traditional or typical family no longer exists due to the changes in the way families are formed, how households are structured and how conception of a child is achieved. There are also increasing number of single parent families or 'reconstituted' families. This pattern is forever evolving. It is therefore not surprising that it gives rise to questions about how and who can register the birth of a child and give the child its first name, who decides the surname the child should take and whether the names given can be changed by re-registration or otherwise.

This edition provides up-to-date provisions of all the relevant statutory material and case law which in particular applies to the issue of changing a child's name when conflict arises between the parents or those with parental responsibility for the child, the biological parents and others.

Change of Name: The Law and Practice is an accessible guide to this sometimes tricky area of law and includes a range of precedents that will prove invaluable to the busy practitioner.

Nasreen Pearce is a retired circuit judge and former district judge in the Principal Registry of the Family Division and currently an Associate Member of 2-3 Hind Court. She has written widely on family law and is a contributor to the Family Court Practice and Butterworths Wills Probate and Administration Service and is Editor and major contributor to Emergency Remedies in the Family Courts and author of A Practitioner's Guide to Probate Disputes and Inheritance Act Claims (Wildy, Simmonds & Hill).

JUDICIAL INDEPENDENCE IN AFRICA

Edited by
Wahab Egbewole

Price: £45.00
ISBN: 9780854902378
Extent: 376pp
Binding: hardback

At the theoretical level, most constitutions in Africa normally provide for the concept of separation of powers with each arm of government assigned defined roles and functions. At the operational level, the Judiciary is regarded as the junior partner with the 'restrictions' on funding in terms of spending as it is usually the prerogative of the Executive branch of government to allocate funds to the Judiciary. To what extent is the check and or control of funding affect the operations of the courts? Can in exercise of the doctrine of separation of powers be expanded with regards to the appointment, discipline and removal of judicial officers? What should be the relationship between the two other arms of government and the Judiciary with regards to control of cases to be determined by the courts. All these issues find a way of determining how effective the Judiciary can be in any governmental arrangement and structure. It is particularly challenging in Africa where democracy in practice is still at the embryonic stage especially with regards to the political office holders. The African Union has in place the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights with a provision for an African Commission to determine disputes. How effective is this Commission and how independent is it?

This book, Judicial Independence in Africa set out to interrogate some of these issues and was put together by scholars of varied and diverse experience in and outside university environment tracing the evolution of the Judiciary as an arm of government, its relationship with other arms of government and the media, the operations of the institution in relation to issues of human rights, gender and juvenile justice.

Wahab Egbewole is a Professor of Jurisprudence and International Law at the University of Ilorin
